

EFFECTS OF ECONOMIC GLOBALIZATION OVER INDIVIDUAL SECURITY

*Mirela ATANASIU, PhD

Abstract: Economic globalization represents just a dimension of such spread phenomenon. Globalization phenomenon has raised contradictory discussions particularly related to the effects it has over the individual security. This is the reason we approach this actual theme aiming to identify and analyze some of these effects affecting the security state perceived on the individual or human groups level. Thus, we will follow the social, economic, psychological etc., direct and indirect, positive and negative effects of economic globalization over the individuals.

Keywords: economic globalization, effects, individual security, national security, level of living, perception.

Globalization whether is regarded as phenomenon or process priori signifies the elimination of territorial limits no matter we refer to political, economic, social, military or any other kind of relations.

The present globalization is seen in terms of unlimited spread of technology, free movement of information, economy uniformity, free movement of money and individuals and political communion in the perspective of a global government.

An important perspective to understand globalization is the premise the economic activity masters the international relations replacing war as moving force in the states' policy as well as in the world politics. Thus, the main feature of economic globalization is its effects and activities transcend the national territorial limits of the states.

* Scientific Researcher, PhD in Military Sciences and Information, Center for Defence and Security Strategic Studies, "Carol I" National Defence University, email: atanasiu.mirela@unap.ro.